ABOUT US

On My Own of Michigan supports adults with developmental disabilities in the transition from dependency to self-sufficiency.

Our members participate in skill-building classes and social outings, and are provided with one-on-one support to help tackle life's challenges along their path to independent living.

As we do this work, we seek partnerships that are sustainable, measurable and mutually beneficial, and look for partners who are passionate about improving the quality of life of our members.

Let's work together to create a life of independence for our members.

THE POWER OF PARTNERSHIP

Improve work culture and employee morale

- Millennial employees who participate in a company's volunteer program are more than 2x as likely to rate their work culture as "very positive," as compared to those who don't volunteer.
- 50% of Millennial employees that volunteer are very loyal toward their company, proud to work there, satisfied with their employer, and likely to recommend their company to a friend.

Better leverage your talent

- 91% of Fortune 500 human resources managers said providing pro bono knowledge and expertise to a nonprofit can be an effective way to cultivate critical business and leadership skills.

It's good for business and for community

- Volunteer programs help companies align themselves with their customers, who will see – and respect – a business' efforts to improve the community.

Becky's Story

After thirty years of living with her parents, Becky dreamed of having an apartment of her own. She thought her developmental disability made independent living impossible but she soon found On My Own and realized her dream was within reach.

Through her work at On My Own, Becky has lived independently for nearly twenty years. She manages her finances, maintains her home, and makes meals for friends regularly. She also has a stable job and makes time to volunteer.

Becky is thriving because of the support she receives at On My Own—work that is possible because of the generosity of community partners like you.
